

Our Nursing and Midwifery winners

9 May

Congratulations to all Women's and Children's Health Network staff nominated in this year's annual Nursing and Midwifery Excellence Awards, held on 6 May.

Vanessa Tilbrook, Midwifery Education Facilitator with our Centre for Education and Training was named the winner of the Excellence in Innovation in Education category.

Vanessa is a registered nurse and midwife with additional qualifications in paediatric nursing, paediatric critical care and has completed a Graduate Certificate in Education – Academic practice.

She is currently completing her Masters by Research in puppet simulation at Central Queensland University.

Leanne Stacy, Simulation Education Facilitator with our Centre for Education and Training was another of the finalists for this award.

Dana Wright, Clinical Practice Consultant, Transition Co-ordinator Paediatric Rehabilitation, won a 2016-17 Premier's Nursing and Midwifery Scholarship.

Dana will travel to the United Kingdom to visit established transition teams to further develop sustainable transition pathways and processes for young adults with disability and/or complex health needs moving to adult services.

Ingrid named SA's Midwife of the Year

Congratulations also to Women's and Children's Hospital midwife Ingrid Kleemann, who has been named the State winner of the Midwife of the Year Award by the Australian College of Midwives and pharmaceutical company Johnson & Johnson.
