About CAMHS

The Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service, called CAMHS for short, is a free, community-based mental health service offered by the Women's and Children's Health Network.

CAMHS provides services to mothers in the perinatal period, infants, children and young people up to the age of 16 (up to 18 in some regions) and their families, with moderate to severe and complex emotional, behavioural or mental health difficulties, across South Australia.

Our services include family and individual therapy, group programs and information for parents/carers and key partners such as schools, GPs, hospitals, government and non-government organisations.

CAMHS prioritises children, young people and families from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander and Culturally and Linguistically Diverse (CALD) backgrounds, as well as children and young people under guardianship.

Our staff include a multidisciplinary workforce of mental health nurses and midwives, social workers, psychologists, psychiatrists, occupational therapists and speech pathologists. We also have Aboriginal Social and Emotional Wellbeing Workers, and Nurse Practitioners in Multicultural Mental Health and Complex Care and Trauma.

CAMHS supports children, adolescents and perinatal mothers with:

- > Significant, persistent emotional difficulties (e.g. unhappiness, depression, anxiety, tearfulness, worthlessness, distress)
- > Difficulty regulating emotions and/or undertaking high risk behaviours (e.g. self-harm, suicidal ideation, disordered eating, persistent aggressive behaviour, substance abuse, risky sexual behaviour, homelessness)
- > Trauma (associated with disconnection from culture or kinship relationships, exposure to disaster or war, abuse, neglect, exposure to domestic and family violence, family separation, adjustment to a new culture and country and/or loss of a family's personal or social identity, complex developmental trauma, medical illness, injury or hospitalisation)
- > Psychiatric illness (e.g. delusional thinking and/or hallucinations)
- > Disability (with associated mental health difficulties)
- > LGBTIQ+ experiences (e.g. gender dysphoria, sexuality, sexual identity).

When to contact CAMHS

Children, young people and families should contact CAMHS if they have talked with a school counsellor or local GP, but the situation doesn't seem to be improving.

GPs, medical staff, schools and service providers can contact CAMHS to seek advice or make a referral.

CAMHS is not able to provide emergency/crisis support. In an emergency, call Triple Zero (000).

How to refer

- > Young people and parents can make a referral to CAMHS by calling CAMHS Connect on 1300 2 CAMHS (1300 222 647), Monday to Friday, from 9.00am-5.00pm, excluding public holidays.
- > Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people can also contact an Aboriginal Social and Emotional Wellbeing Worker directly at their local community team.
- > If you are hearing impaired, or if English is your second language, we can arrange an interpreter for you.

What next?

Talking to CAMHS Connect will help identify the most suitable service for you. This may result in a referral to CAMHS or we might recommend other community services or supports for you that better meet your needs.

Participation is voluntary and young people under the age of 16 will require consent from a legal guardian before accessing a CAMHS service.

Privacy

We will send you information about a client's rights and responsibilities, and how we manage personal information, before the first appointment with CAMHS.

More information

For more information about CAMHS visit the Women's and Children's Hospital website at www.wch.sa.gov.au.

If you have questions about privacy, or how CAMHS works, contact the CAMHS worker you're booked in to see, or ask at your first appointment.
